Trade Advisory Council, Manchester Area

(In order to try and counter the activities of the British Union of Fascists and other bodies the Board of Deputies of British Jews in 1936 created a Co-ordinating Committee, which became the Defence Committee, concerning itself with social, political and economic matters in which anti-Semitism played a part. As well as addressing defamatory statements, its work included investigating periodic complaints about economic discrimination. In 1938 an ad hoc committee, known as the Trades Advisory Council, was set up to advise the Defence Committee on trade practices and related matters. It met infrequently until the outbreak of war in 1939. In 1940 it was reconstituted and a Secretariat appointed. It continued as an ad hoc committee, but in 1941 adopted a constitution as a democratic organisation based on a membership encompassing Jewish traders, industrialists and professional men. These are the records of the Manchester Area Council.)

Manchester Great and New Synagogue

Manchester Great Synagogue (before 1926 Manchester Hebrew Congregation)

(The early Jewish settlers worshipped at Garden Street (c.1796) and from 1806 a converted warehouse in Ainsworth's Court off Long Millgate. In 1824 they moved to a custom-built synagogue in Halliwell Street. Halliwell Street Synagogue was replaced by the Manchester Great Synagogue on 140 Cheetham Hill Road. It was designed by Thomas Bird and consecrated on 11 March 1858. Its members were mainly anglicised Jews of German origin and it was known as the "Englischer Schule" (English Synagogue).

The Manchester New Synagogue and Bethamidrash was built on 122 Cheetham Hill Road in 1888-1889 and opened 1889. It has a seating capacity of 400 and a Bethamidrash (House of Study) for 200 readers. Its founders were mostly shopkeepers, travellers and workshop masters of Russo-Polish origin.

On 27 Dec 1964 the Manchester and Great Synagogue amalgamated under the name of "Manchester and Great Synagogue". In 1974 the Great and New Synagogue moved to the Great's former 'Crumpsall branch' at Stenecourt)

Manchester Reform Synagogue

(Founded in 1857 and located at Park Place on Cheetham Hill Road. A Reform burial ground was established at Higher Lane in Whitefield and burial records were kept from the foundation of the synagogue to the 1970s. On 1 June 1941 the synagogue at Park Place was destroyed in the blitz. Temporary accommodation was found and services continued under the leadership of Rabbi Goldberg. In 1949 the site for the new synagogue on Jackson's Row in Manchester was purchased with an award from the War Damage Commission. The site was consecrated on 18 May 1952 and the synagogue opened on 29 November 1953. As the congregation grew the building was expanded and additional synagogues were opened, Menorah in South Manchester (1972) and Sha'arei Shalom in North Manchester (1976).)

South Manchester Synagogue

(The increasing concentration of Eastern Europeans in North Manchester was one factor which persuaded a number of longer-established and more anglicised families to move across the city and settle in new homes of Upper Brook Street. There in 1872 some forty families pooled their resources to found the first South Manchester Synagogue in Sidney Street. The congregation moved to Wilbraham Road in August 1913 and more recently in 2002 to Bowdon.)

3. Chevra Kadishas (Jewish Burial Societies)

Manchester Burial Society of Polish Jews Ltd., later Manchester Jewish Burial Society Ltd.

(Formed in 1877 the Society (a registered limited company) offered burial rights to shareholders whatever their synagogal allegiance. It was founded and controlled by immigrants and in effect served chevroth without burial grounds of their own. It appears to have used Urmston Cemetery.)

Committee and Annual General Meeting Minutes, with some balance sheets, 1901-1952; authorisations for burial, 1881-1966; lists of graves; permits to erect gravestones, 1945 - 1958 (ref GB127.M129).

Manchester Hebrew Sick and Burial Society

(The Hebrew Sick and Burial Benefit Society was Manchester first Jewish Friendly Society. Founded, probably by Joseph Slazenger Moss, who became Life President in 1860. It was essentially an attempt by a few Anglo-Jewish leaders to promote a form of contributory insurance amongst 'those whose income was not adequate to meet the contingencies of sickness and death' and who might otherwise become a serious charge on synagogal funds. Members paid an entrance fee varying according to age from 4s 6d (between the ages and 15 and 30) to 9s, and a subscription of 4d a week, which entitled them to weekly allowances in times of sickness, to the services of the society's medical officer, to shiva benefits, and to free burial)

4. Cemeteries

Please note microfilms are accessible on open access at Manchester Central Library – no advanced booking required.

The earliest Jewish burial place was opened on Brindle Heath Road, Pendleton in 1794. Prior to this Jews who died in Manchester had to be interred in the burial grounds in Liverpool. Following the closure of the Pendleton cemetery in 1840 a cemetery was opened at Miles Platting, Queens Road (closed in c.1872) and at Prestwich, Bury New Road, (closed c.1914). The present cemetery at Crumpsall on Crescent Road was purchased by the Great Synagogue in 1884. The Reform Synagogue opened a cemetery in Whitefield in 1864. We hold:

Cheetwood Junior and Infant School, Cheetham

(A new school building was erected and opened 16 September 1889 with accommodation for 1,250 children. It was built to take pupils from the Strangeways Boy's Board School (formerly Joynson Street) and Bury New Road Girls Board School. The school was opened Sep 1889 as Waterloo Road Board School. The school had a large number of Jewish pupils, who made up four-fifths of the school population by 1907. The majority of these pupils were new arrivals in the UK. The school was evacuated to Darwen 1 September 1939 and was reopened as a single department 15 Jan 1940. In April 1940 those pupils still in Darwen merged with a local school and 1 July 1940 the school opened again as 3 separate departments. In early 1941 some children were evacuated to Colne. From 1941-July 1959 the school shared the premises with Manchester Jews' School. The Jewish Infant and Junior Departments moved to new premises in July 1953 and pupils from Southall Street transferred to Waterloo Road and the merged school was named Cheetwood County Primary School. It was renamed Cheetwood Junior and Infant School 1 January 1971.)

Manchester Jewish Soup Kitchen

(In November 1895 a meeting was convened at the Manchester Jewish Workingmen's Club to consider ways and means to alleviate suffering in the Jewish community. The creation of the Manchester Jewish Soup Kitchen in 1896 was the result of this meeting. In December 1906 a building in Southall Street was completed, with a purpose built dining hall. The meals consisted of soup containing meat and vegetables, together with bread. Mrs Dolly Phillips (1903-) and her husband, Harry, were at the forefront of the organisation. Mrs Dolly Phillips first became involved in the Soup Kitchen in 1920 at the age of 17. As Honorary Secretary she introduced the meals on wheels service in 1942. The building on Southall Street was sold and the kitchen of the Manchester Jews Benevolent Society was used. In 1978 the service moved to Holy Law Synagogue in Rita Glickman House, Prestwich. Research Papers of Bill Williams, 1976-2007

Typescript of one of Bill Williams' papers; 'Jews and Other Foreigners: Refugees from European Fascism in the Manchester Region' as well as his research papers relating to the Jewish community in Manchester (mainly in the 19th and early 20th Century). Bill Williams has studied modern Anglo-Jewry extensively. His research interests include; Manchester Jewry; Holocaust testimonies; leadership in Anglo-Jewry; the reception and experiences of refugees to the Manchester region, 1933-1940. Major publications include: Jews and Other Foreigners: Manchester and the Reception of Refugees from European Fascism (2011); Jewish Manchester: An Illustrated History (2008); Sir Sidney Hamburger and Manchester Jewry. Religion, City and Community (1999); 'Heritage and Community: Rescuing Manchester's Jewish Past,' in A. Kushner, ed., The Jewish Heritage in British History (1992); Manchester Jewry, a Pictorial History, 1788-1988 (1988); The Making of Manchester Jewry, 1740-1875 (1976). Bill Williams is also the Founder of the Manchester Jewish Museum. (ref GB127.M790)

12. Published Material

The definitive book on the development of the Jewish community in the Manchester area is Bill Williams, The Making of Manchester Jewry, 1740-1875 (296.094273 WI). The same author has also produced:

- Jewish Manchester An Illustrated History (Breedon Books, 2008)
- Manchester Jewry a Pictorial History, 1788-1988 (q942.733 WI)
- Sir Sidney Hamburger and Manchester Jewry (296.094273Ha), a biography which looks at a leading figure in the 20th century Jewish community.

A potted history of Manchester Jewry by Bill Williams can be found on the Moving Here web site [archived site].

Monty Dobkin wrote two books which looked at Manchester Jewry. These were Tales of Manchester Jewry and Manchester in the Thirties (942.733 DO) and Rothschild in Manchester and other tales from the history of Manchester Jewry (q929.2 Ro). He also compiled and edited 150 years of King David Schools, formerly Manchester Jews School 1838-1988 (q377.96 ON(065)). A different approach is taken by the book They Came From The Haim (f942.733 JE). This 1995 publication by Jewish Social Services is subtitled History of Manchester Jewry from 1867, and lists events of Jewish interest at local, national and international level on a year by year basis.

Julia Maine has published the article The Jewish Community of the South Manchester Suburb of Didsbury 1891-1914.

We also hold a MA dissertation by Richard W. Jackson on 'Manchester's Little Jerusalem: the Changing Face of Red Bank' (University of Manchester, 2007) (BR 942.733004 JAC (485)).

Insights into the inter-war period are given in Sharon Gewirtz, 'Anti-Fascist Activity in Manchester's Jewish Community in the 1930's', published in Manchester Region History Review, 1990, Vol. 4, no.1. A different aspect of the inter-war years is covered by Rainer Liedtke's article 'Self-Help in Manchester Jewry: The Provincial Independent Tontine Society', published in Manchester Region History Review, 1992, Vol. VI.

Novels may also be a source of information. Louis Golding, Magnolia Street looks at relationships between Jews and non-Jews, being set in the Hightown area of Manchester in the early twentieth century.

The children's author and journalist Leila Berg's autobiography Flickerbook: an autobiography 1917-1939 (Granta Books 1997) (942.732 Be) offers an interesting insight into the daughter of a Jewish doctor growing up in Salford in the 1920s and 1930s.

These books and more can be found at Manchester Central Library. The Local Images Collection which can be found on-line at www.images.manchester.gov.uk.

13. Other Organisations and Useful Web Sites

Manchester Jewish Museum

190 Cheetham Hill Road, Manchester, M8 8LW, 0161 834 9879

<http://www.manchesterjewishmuseum.com>

Manchester Jewish Museum is housed in a former Spanish and Portuguese synagogue in Cheetham Hill. It lies in the heart of what was once the Jewish quarter of the city. The building, which dates from 1874, is Moorish in style and is the oldest surviving synagogue building in Manchester.

Downstairs the synagogue has been restored to its original splendour with magnificent stained glass windows and Moorish decoration. The former ladies' gallery upstairs houses a permanent exhibition on the history of Manchester Jewry. The museum collects, documents and interprets material relating to this history, which dates back to the late 18th century. Much of the material covers the social and religious life of the community, including the process of immigration. The museum holds extensive photographic and oral history collections.
